'CARMEN' IN ENGLISH AT THE CENTURY

Bizet's Master Work Is Sung for First Time This Season-Scores a Success.

Though the Metropolitan has announced a revival of "Carmen" as one of the events of the season the Century has stolen a march, and last night put Rizet's immortal work upon its stage. The Century's performance will give neither Miss Farrar nor Mr. Toscanini any sleepless nights, but after the lamentable "Bohemian Girl" of the week before it was at least a relief. It was a performance which bore evidences of rehearsal, and one in which the scenery and costumes were both admirable-thanks to the Metropolitan and Mr. Edward Siedle.

Miss Kathleen Howard's portraval of Carmen will scarcely go down in history beside the names of Emma Calve or Clotilde Bressler-Gianoli, Miss Howard was well favored in face and figure, but her love scenes with Don José somewhat resembled those of Paul and Virginia.

As for Mr. Kingston's Don José, it was that of a lay figure possessed of a beautiful voice which it did not know how to use. Altogether handsome was this Don José, a style of manly beauty which appeared to consider any trace of emotion as fatal to that beauty's perfect contour Mr. Chalmers, one of the company's of the French Academy and managing di- sincerest artists, was little at home as rector of the Cornedie Française, died at the toreador, and, all in all, the best perp. m. to-day from intestinal grip, com- formance of the evening was given by
